WOLVERTON COLLEGE A ROSWELL FEATURE

Standing near the corner of Richardson avenue and Sixth street at noon or four o'clock in the afternoon the observer will notice a great crowd of young people pouring out of the cement stone building that faces west just north of the corner. It is the Woolverton Practical Business College dismissing its students, and the average man, even citizens of Roswell, will open his eyes in wonder that this institution has reached such proportions with comparatively no "noise" and within such a short period of time. This college is one of the leading institutions of Roswell, and should be given the proper credit, for it has made itself through its own efforts and by its own merits.

It was on last May 7 that this school was opened. Since that time it has had 150 students enrolled. Of that number 115 now belong to the school and are on its rolls. Probably sixty are now in personal attendance, the personal of the attending students changing constantly as it does in any college. There is never a full attendance at one time of all the students enrolled in any school or college. The school now has a faculty of four teachers, and their time is all taken up.

The Woolverton Practical Business College people came to Roswell and asked for assistance in erecting a building. A fine large lot was secured and the business men were called upon for stock subscriptions. Because of many other recent calls for aid, and because of other, impending circumstances the assistance did not come forward as expected. The college people had to go ahead on their own resources and put up the best building they could. A small building was erected on one side of their lot, the remainder being left for the main building that will come later. The small building is now crowded and no more students can be admitted except as those now in attendance complete their work and make room for others. The demands for more room, however, do not cease to come in. To meet these demands the management has decided to put in a correspondence course so that many students may study at home. This will also do away with the objection many make to paying the high price commanded by weekly and monthly board in Roswell. To this end men will be put to work soliciting for correspondence students throughout the Pecos Valley and the management hopes to increase its enrollment to 1,000.

The course of short-hand taught will be the new Aristography, invented and issued by Isaac S. Dement, champion stenographer of the world with a record of 402 words per minute. This new course or system of short-hand has been adopted by twenty of the leading business colleges of the United States and will be adopted by the Woolverton college in their personal instruction work as well as in the correspondence course. This new system does away with vowels and position in short-hand writing and eliminates all guess work in short-hand reading. As there is much less to memorize in the Aristography system, it can be learned in half the time of the Pitman and other systems. Write ers of the old methods can learn it in a couple of weeks or less. The correspondence course to be put out here will be the same as that of the Draughon colleges, of the South. It will be ready for the public in about two weeks.

At a Country Dance.

Senator Bob Taylor, of Tennessee, who is something of a fiddler himself says:

"Common folks cannot understand so-called high-class music, nor the figures of these newfangled dances, and therefore, they are in a condition which is beautifully illustrated by a tale I used to hear before politics snatched me bald-headed. At an old time country dance, the fiddler resigned their bows and took their places on the platform. The floor manager rose and imperiously shouted: 'Get your partners for a cotillion. All you ladies and gentlemen who wear shoes and stockings will take your places in the center of the room; all you ladies and gentlemen who wear shoes and no stockings will take your places immediately behind them; and all your barefooted crowd must jig it around in the corners.'"

PECOS VALLEY IMPROVEMENTS

General Offices Here Will be Enlarged During the Present Year.

It is unofficially stated, but on good authority that the Santa Fe will make extensive improvements in its general office accommodation here during the present year. Just the extent of the increased accommodation is not yet determined, but will include at least a large addition to the general office building. The business of the road has grown enormously during the last two years or so and every department is cramped for room. It is possible that the improvements will take the form of an entirely new building of fire proof construction but this will not be determined until the meeting of the stockholders in the Spring.

The great improvements now going forward all along the Santa Fe lines means of course, extensive improvements along the line in this section this year. The Pecos Valley system having its southern terminus at Pecos and its northern terminus at Amarillo has become a valuable railroad property during the last few years, and it is rumored that one of the acts of the stockholders meeting in the spring will be the voting of $15,000,000 of new bonds to be used in the improvement and equipment of the system.—Amarillo Herald.
